Modeling Agents

This course will focus on various topics and fundamental questions in cognition and language that have traditionally played a crucial role for understanding and / or computational modeling of intelligent entities. Some topics include, for instance, the relation between language and thought, the role of language for social learning and coordination, computational cognitive mechanisms supporting goal-directed behavior, and more. The course will be structured as a reading group, i.e., a reading list of papers will be supplied, and during most of the sessions one or two papers will be discussed. The paper discussions will be conducted in small groups and led by designated 'experts' (more details will be announced). Towards the end of the course, there will likely be a few poster sessions, where selected papers will be presented as posters prepared by the course participants (more details will be announced in the first course session).
